

Christoffer Kok is Head of the Stress Test Experts Division of the ECB's Directorate General Horizontal Line Supervision. He has a leading role in the ECB's supervisory stress test activities including both the biennial ECB/SSM supervisory stress tests and more thematic stress test exercises and reviews. He previously led the development of the ECB's top-down stress test models. He has also been extensively involved in quantitative impact studies of regulatory reforms, such as the macroeconomic assessments of Basel II and Basel III, derivatives reforms and TLAC. He also regularly works for the International Monetary Fund on short-term mission assignments. Previously, he worked as a Principal Economist for 8 years in the ECB's Monetary Policy Directorate and he also worked at Danmarks Nationalbank. He has published several articles on monetary and macroprudential policy issues in academic journals and books. He holds an MSc in Economics from Aarhus University and Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne University and an MSc in Finance from Copenhagen Business School.